Oregon is Nation's First State to Conserve Native Bees

Celebrate Oregon Native Bee Day on Saturday, August 15

EUGENE, ORE. -- Governor Kate Brown proclaimed August 15 as the official Oregon Native Bee Conservation Awareness Day. The Governor announced the day of action after learning about the dire impacts to native bees in Oregon.

Native bees pollinate eighty percent of flowering trees, plants and wildflowers and are a key indicator species for the health of all ecosystems. Some west coast native bees are believed on the brink of extinction.

Oregonians are being encouraged to plant pollinator habitats, leave un-mowed sections of lawn for foraging areas and refrain from using pesticides. Native bees such as bumble bees are extremely sensitive to pesticide exposure. Twelve recent bee die-offs in Oregon were linked to use of neonicotinoid pesticides. Over 100,000 million native bees perished.

Beyond Toxics is raising awareness with bee related events during August. Come celebrate the protection and preservation of native and honey bees and be part of a growing movement to honor the hard work of these amazing creatures!

Celebrate Native Bee Day all day at Cornucopia restaurant and pub, located at Lincoln and 17th Streets. For breakfast, lunch and dinner, 10% of your purchase will help support Beyond Toxics and their continuing work to help Save Oregon's Bees. Dine in or take home.

Bring the kids come to Charnel Mulligan Park, located less than a block from Cornucopia on 17th Street and Charnelton. Families can learn more about how to help create healthy native bee habitats. Guest bee expert Brian Dykstra and Beyond Toxics Executive Director Lisa Arkin will be on hand to educate and entertain. There will be fun, free activities. For more information call 541-465-8860. 11am-12:30pm

On August 20th Beyond Toxics will host a Bee Jazzy Celebration at Silvan Ridge Winery. Enjoy the beautiful scenery, wine tasting, live music with the Zac Wolfe Jazz Band and an amazing silent auction. The event benefits Beyond Toxics and their work to save Oregon's bees. Sign up for the Party Bus and join the fun out at Silvan Ridge Winery. Time: 5:30pm-8:30pm. Tickets are $30 online or at the door. For more information call Christine Cameron at 541-465-8860.

Beyond Toxics works to guarantee environmental protections and health for all communities and residents. We expose root causes of toxic pollution and help communities find effective, lasting solutions.
